

2008 Ferret Vet List

HISTORY

Prior to 1995, licensed veterinarians in the State of California were required by law to report to the Department of Fish & Game the names of any clients who brought a ferret into their clinic. Eventually the legislature acknowledged that veterinarians should not be liable to perform law enforcement duties and overturned the law. Unfortunately many veterinarians in the state mistakenly believe they are still required to report ferret owners and consequently will not see or treat ferrets for fear of violating a law that no longer applies. As a result, ferret owners faced a challenge locating a health care provider for their beloved pets. A veterinarian underground sprung up of doctors willing to see and treat ferrets without reporting their owners, but to protect themselves from prosecution, many of the vets required ferret owners to bring their animals to the back door, in covered carriers, by special appointment on days the clinics were normally closed, or would perform house calls rather than allow the ferrets to be brought to the clinics at all. It was amidst this atmosphere that the original Ferrets Anonymous Ferret Vet List was created.

The Ferret Vet List originated with the Ferrets Anonymous list which has been distributed in printed form since the early 1990's and in recent years been posted on their website. Since its inception, people from all over California have contributed the names of vets and clinics that see and treat ferrets. To date the accuracy of the information contained in the list rested primarily with the contributors. In 2001 the Golden State Ferret Society and Bay Area Legion of Superferrets decided to help out with the list by authenticating the current listings. Each of the 258 listed clinics were phoned during January, 2001, and asked if they still treated ferrets.

In the early 2000s a bill was passed making legal for vets to care for ferrets without fear of repercussions. However we continue to keep this list to make it easier for ferret owners to find ferret knowledgeable and ferret friendly vets.

TODAY

In 2008, the Golden State Ferret Society, the Northern California Ferret Alliance and West Coast Ferrets took the list and created a Bay Area version and called all the vets listed here. The Ferret Vet List is a work in progress. If, after checking for current entries, you do not see a clinic that should be included, or you find data that needs to be updated, be sure to contact us with your information.
